

Riva launches Venice table

Published: 08-Feb-2012

Italian firm Riva has launched the Venice table

The table has been designed by Claudio Bellini. It sports a unique and sculptural style by integrating natural and the industrial elements together. Pieces of weathered watery logs of briccole wood constitute its base providing a natural look to the item. The logs are cracked and add a distinct note with their imperfections.

The look of the furniture is complemented by its top which is made in smooth polished steel. The table top's design draws reference to the water surface with its smooth and reflective surface. The logs penetrate the table top. The design of the item makes it ideal to be used in contemporary or rustic-styled interiors.
